

HUDSON FAMILY COLLECTION

Historical Background

Margaret Hudson (née Birchall) (1852-1927) was a teacher who trained at Southlands Training College between 1873-4, just a year after the institution opened. Born in Liverpool, her family were members of the local Wesleyan Methodist church. Her future husband, John Newton Hudson (1853-1933), also a Liverpoolian, was teaching in London at the time she was studying. On completing her teaching qualifications, she returned to the north-west to reside and work in Bacup in Lancashire. It was there that the couple married in 1877. The Hudsons were active in Methodist life in the area until their retirement, when they relocated to Manchester.

Custodial History

This collection represents a portion of a larger body of family papers that descended through the maternal line of the depositor. They were received by the Oxford Centre for Methodism and Church History in 2021. Other items from the larger collection are now at Aberdeen City Archives, Greater Manchester County Record Office, Liverpool Archives, and Robert Gordon University Library. Manuscript items relating to Margaret Hudson's teaching training are found at HUD/1-3. Correspondence spanning a longer period is at HUD/4. All printed books are grouped at HUD/6.

Description

The major part of this collection comprises items relating to Margaret Hudson's teacher training at Southlands College (and elsewhere), such as exercise books, certificates, and correspondence. HUD/3 is a friendship album dating 1872-8 that includes entries by over fifty named individuals, many of which were Hudson's contemporaries at Southlands. HUD/6 includes printed books by other members of the wider family, such as works by Harry Lindsay Hudson, and a photocopy of the life of Theophilus Woolmer.
